Ornament making will benefit local children in need

Submitted by The Office of Student Activities

Imagine the wide, glowing eyes of a young child as they open a gift during the holidays. A gift that may not have been possible without you.

You can make the difference in the life of a young child on Wednesday, December 4th by coming to make a holiday ornament in the Rotunda between 10am and 4pm. For each hand-made ornament that Bryant College makes for the Holiday Tree in Providence, Hasbro will donate a toy for a needy child.

Last year, the Bryant College community made about 800 holiday ornaments. Together, we can break the goal of making 1000 holiday ornaments. Fliers on this holiday initiative have been distributed to all college employees and are available at the Bryant Center Information Desk.

Volunteers are needed to staff a craft table in the Rotunda on December 4th during the hours of 10a.m. and 4p.m. To find out more information or volunteer for this community service initiative please call Student Activities at 232-6160.

Last year's Hasbro ornament making was a huge success. Let's make this year's seven better.

Cpt. Granfield bids farewell

Danielle Porter
Editor-in-Chief

Captain Christopher Granfield of Bryant's ROTC will soon be concluding his duties here and migrating to Fort Drum, NY, for his next assignment.

Born and raised in Melrose, MA, Granfield began his career in ROTC while attending Suffolk University in the late eighties. Upon graduating from Suffolk University in 1989 with a bachelor's degree in Business Management and a minor in English Literature, he was commissioned as a Regular Army Infantry officer and went to the Infantry Officer Basic Course at Fort Banning, GA, continuing a generations-old family tradition. He was only the second officer in his family; as stated by Granfield, "My next oldest brother beat me out!"

Upon commissioning, Granfield was assigned to duty overseas. He lived in Mannheim, Germany for three years and worked various jobs for the Army; training with the German, French, British, Belgian, Italian, Dutch, Canadian, and Spanish armies.

Granfield returned to the US in 1993, truly understanding that the United States was THE best place on the face of the earth, and next attended advanced military schooling at Fort Banning, GA, and Fort Sill, OK, after which he worked at Fort Banning, GA, as the Executive Officer of the US Army Infantry School and as Aide-de-Camp to Major General John W. Hendrix.

Granfield's next assignment was teaching ROTC at Providence College and Bryant College; he arrived on campus on November 14, 1994. Granfield acknowledges, "I was impressed with the Bryant Community from Day #1!" Granfield further comments:

Captain Christopher Granfield (left), along with commissioned officer Joseph Geremia and Sargeant Bruce Pare, celebrates at last year's commissioning of seven officers.

"In my last two years here at Bryant, I have met many dedicated professionals, both faculty and staff/administration. It has been the hard work, efforts and support of these individuals (I would love to mention you all by name but the list goes on and on) that have made my job here at Bryant less difficult and more enjoyable! I thank you all and value your friendship and counsel.

"The most enjoyable part of my two years here at Bryant has been my interaction with the students, and you know who you are! It has been my pleasure to teach each of you something about the US Army and the military as a whole. One of the ROTC students who walks among you now might very well be a future Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, after all, General (Retired) Colin Powell got his start in ROTC in New York City.

"When both my parents passed away during the summer of 1995, I greatly appreciated the sympathy and condolences of the Bryant community. Thank you. It was my pleasure to provide "guidance," a "shoulder to cry on," or a hot cup of coffee, and though I am leaving, SFC Stobb is a fully capable substitute.

"While teaching ROTC, Granfield attended graduate school at Providence College's MBA program, with a concentration in Marketing. In addition, he maintained his hobbies of restoring antique cars and furniture, backpacking, mountain biking, skiing, and reading. Regarding his fetish for cars, Granfield remarks, "The two 'loves' of my life are a 1965 Mustang convertible and a 1967 Chevelle Super Sport."

Granfield's next assignment is in a troop unit back in the "main stream" Army, where he will be assigned to the 10th Mountain Division (Light Infantry) at Fort Drum, NY, approximately one hour north of Syracuse.

In parting, Granfield states, "I do not know how much time I will be spending in NY and how much time I will be spending deployed overseas, but the doormat in front of my house says 'Welcome' (you just have to bring your own skis). Nevertheless, SFC Stobb will have my address, and I would appreciate hearing from some of you and seeing how your futures unfold.

"I leave you with one parting thought: Go ARMY...Beat NAVY!"

Granfield's scheduled date of departure is Wednesday, December 11. He promises to be back for the 1997 commissioning, but please stop by room 261 in the Unistructure to bid him a fond farewell.

Drug scandal at URI fraternity

The Associated Press

A University of Rhode Island sophomore was ordered held without bail following his arrest on charges he sold drugs out of his room in the Sigma Chi fraternity house.

Michael Tancorra, 20, of Glen Rock, N.J., turned himself in to South Kingstown police Monday. Authorities earlier had found a half-ounce of cocaine, $800 in cash and a small amount of marijuana in his room, Detective Sgt. David Kenneally said.

Police earlier received a tip that drugs were being sold from a second-story bedroom. As the watched Friday, a man scaled the fire escape, entered the bedroom and came out soon after.

Police approached the man and found approximately three grams of cocaine on him, Kenneally said. James Lavan, 18, of Aberdeen, N.J., was charged with one count of cocaine possession.

After Lavan's arrest, police obtained a search warrant for Tancorra's bedroom. Tancorra was not there at the time of the search, but he called soon after, got an attorney, then turned himself in, Kenneally said.

Tancorra was arraigned in District Court on one count each of possessing cocaine with intent to deliver, delivering cocaine and marijuana possession.

He also was cited for violating the conditions of bail imposed after his arrest on Feb. 15 on a charge of assaulting someone while wearing brass knuckles. That case is pending.

He was jailed pending a bail hearing Friday.

Students take their chance in Beta Theta Pi's sixth annual Putt-A-Thon.

The Panhellenic Council sponsored a "Jump-a-thon" Wednesday in the Rotunda.

Submissions for the final issue of The Archway will be taken Monday November 25 from 2p.m. to 4p.m. in our office.

Vrooom

Driving; is it an adventure or a chore? Judging by all those frowns out there on the faces of your average licensed drivers (the unlicensed drivers are smiling), it sure isn't all that much fun, which is unfortunate considering that all the alternatives to driving are even less enjoyable.

Having a full two hours with nothing to do, I jumped for joy and hopped into the driver's seat, Destination: Federal Hill (heck, I'd never been there before). What fun! I suppose I should have consulted the road map before even getting into the car. Nevertheless, the more I drove, the more grouchy and hostile I became. Whoa Nelly, my blood pressure is usually very low; what was happening here?

I have since realized that turn signals--rather, the misuse of them--are indeed a bit of a pet peeve of mine. I've come to rely on them (go figure). It would ultimately be a really great thing if a big neon sign would flash on the hood of your car whenever the hilarious driver proceeding yourself did not use this handy mechanism, wouldn't you say? And here emerges that hostility I was talking about.

However, if you were to question one's intelligence (actually, it's more of a sense of tactility) in such a case as afore mentioned, would you indeed escape the situation without a scratch? Take, for instance, the RI case of Mr. Emery (I forget his first name). While leaving a local amusement park, a car cut Emery, enraging him enough to follow the car (or what he thought to be the car) of the person who cut him off. Eventually the car pulled off to the side of the road (driver wanted to lose this creep on his tail), and, of course, Emery pulled over as well, with the end result being Emery murdering the driver. Ahh, say what? Emery is now either beneath the Jamestown bridge or guiltlessly frolicking in the shadows (hiding from the RI state police and/or FBI).

Okay. Another instance of the small but unbridled state of anger enraptured in RI (elsewhere too, I suppose); about a year ago, while riding in a car with a friend, they were using hand signals to notify other drivers of their various turns (rear left brake light was out). Everything was going okay (lot of laughs from drivers-by; heh heh, yeah, we're dorks) until someone did not see his arm sticking out the window. So he makes his turn and, in doing so, hears yelps and hollers from behind him. Needless to say, this really mad driver followed us for nearly half an hour until we eventually pulled over and apologized to no end. Scary stuff.

With that, I wish you all a nice Thanksgiving break. Oh yeah, what's my point? Umm, be careful when driving out there; drivers are less and less forgiving. Leisure driving simply isn't allowed anymore, so be serious all the time. No, actually, try to remember that driving is and/or can be fun. Smile when driving because of all the fun you are having. Drive safely.

Explosion levels house in Warwick

Carolyn Thompson
Associated Press Writer

James Sherman was raking leaves in his back yard when the ear-ringing explosion hit. He turned around to see a cloud of debris airborne above a neighbor's house. He didn't wait to see it come down.

"He was screaming, 'Get out, get out!'" said Sherman's wife, Helen, recalling the scene after a natural gas explosion leveled their neighbor's home and sent shards of glass, plywood and roofing raining through their Warwick Neck neighborhood Monday.

With a cloud of dust in the air, the couple ran down the road, away from the blast and their home of 54 years, not pausing long enough to get in their car.

"I went through the second World War," James Sherman said. "I had bombs go off near us. It was nothing like this."

The explosion reduced 391 Samuel Gorton Ave. from a two-story home to a huge pile of rubble, ripped paint from the houses on either side and blew out the windows of a half dozen nearby homes.

Neatly manicured lawns were covered with glass, boards and twisted window and door frames. A power line was draped with tarpaper.

The 12:45 p.m. blast occurred after a construction crew disrupted a gas line, police and Providence Gas Co. officials said. A police officer working a detail near the construction site was slightly hurt.

There were no other injuries, though a dog that belonged to the residents of the destroyed home--Janet and David Horta and their two children--was presumed to have been killed.

A crew from D'Ambra Construction of Warwick contracted by the city for a sewer project disrupted the line that feeds the house from a large underground gas main. A spark from inside the house then may have ignited the leaking gas, Providence Gas spokeswoman Barbara Hamilton Trainor said.

"We don't know how it came about," she said. "There are pieces of pipe to look at, meters to look at."

Michael D'Ambra, president and owner of the company, said a crew was excavating the street when a tooth on a bucket caught a gas line. It stretched but did not break, he said.

Frederick Mason, a Providence Gas spokesman, said a company representative had told the crew the approximate location of the line before they began digging. D'Ambra said he does not fault Providence Gas for not being more specific.

"We do believe that D'Ambra Construction is not at fault, but we're not blaming the gas company," he said. "It's just an unfortunate accident and we'll get to the bottom of it. We're lucky no one was hurt and we've offered the (Hortas) food, clothing, shelter--we told them we would do anything at all to help them."

Part of the Hortas' roof landed in the driveway of the house next door, where Margaret Dlugozima has lived for nine months.

"We knew we had to get out of the house," said Dlugozima, whose windows shattered and walls cracked. "We pretty much grabbed our things and ran."

The neighborhood was evacuated immediately after the explosion. All but residents of the most severely damaged homes were allowed back later in the afternoon.

No fire occurred, which was fortunate because firefighters may have had a hard time battling a major blaze. Warwick was under a state of emergency due to a water main break Sunday in neighboring Cranston that cut off water to 80 percent of the city.

The Horta family returned to what was left of their home and gingerly picked through the debris. A baby bassinet, curtains, furniture cushions, dresser drawers, clothing and other personal belongings lay strewn among splintered wood and pink insulation.

The Hortas did not speak to reporters. Janet Horta's brother, Donald Lavigne, said his parents had lived in the home several months while his father recovered from a stroke. They left two weeks ago, he said.

A similar explosion occurred during sewer construction in Warwick in January 1993. It, too, razed one home and damaged others. D'Ambra was the contractor on that project as well, said John Pagliarini, spokesman for Mayor Lincoln Chafee.

Monday's explosion occurred in a residential section known as Warwick Neck, located in the southeastern part of the city, near the former Rocky Point Amusement Park.

Assault (Domestic)

November 15, 1996- A student reported she had been assaulted by a suitemate. The student received several injuries. The suitemate was arrested by Smithfield Police on a charge of domestic violence. Charges have been filed on campus as well.

Harassing Phone Calls

November 15, 1996- A student reported that she had received numerous harassing phone calls. A report was taken from the student. It is believed that these calls stemmed from an incident earlier that day.

Car Fire

November 15, 1996- Public Safety responded to a report of a car fire in front of hall 14. When DPS arrived, the engine compartment was engulfed in flames. An attempt was made by DPS to extinguish the flames, but they were unsuccessful. Smithfield Fire Department arrived on the scene and pried open the hood to extinguish the flames. The vehicle was towed off campus. The fire may have started from a gasoline leak. With the exception of the powder released from the fire extinguisher, the two cars on the side of this vehicle were not damaged.

Fire Alarm (False)

November 15, 1996- DPS was dispatched to a fire alarm in Hall 9. A check of the hall found a large gathering clearing out of a suite area. The smoke detector outside that suite area was activated. The cause was ruled accidental due to several people smoking under the detector. All units were shortly cleared.

Arson

November 17, 1996- Someone set a bulletin board in the hall 16 lobby on fire during the early hours of November 17. This is First Degree Arson, and, if caught, the person or persons can be sentenced up to 5 years in prison. This case is still under investigation. Anyone with information about this incident is asked to contact Public Safety at 232-6001. You may remain anonymous if you wish.

Disorderly Conduct

November 15, 1996- While working at the ECS, two individuals who claimed they were alumni stated that they were signed in under a particular student's name. Because they didn't tell DPS at first that they were alumni, they needed a guest pass. When DPS told them to come into the ECS, they decided instead to drive on campus. They were very abusive and seemed to be intoxicated. Because they were not cooperative, they were not allowed on campus and SPD was called. Charges have been filed.

Water main break floods Cranston

Rachel Zoll
Associated Press Writer

A broken water main flooded city streets Sunday, submerging cars to their windows and forcing more than 100 people from their homes. Rescuers used rafts to evacuate elderly residents.

Authorities did not know what caused the 5 1/2-foot main to break shortly before noon, blowing a 15-foot hole in a city street. Muddy water gushed past homes and businesses for about a mile in this city of 76,000 before the main was shut off at 4 p.m. No injuries were reported.

"We were driving down the road and I had to take my glasses off. I said to myself, 'Am I hallucinating?'" said Lori Antonelli, who turned her car around and went home. "It looked like the city was flooded."

The car driven by Jeff Roleck and his 2 1/2-year-old son was swamped. "I tried to back up the car but it was flowing so fast I couldn't do it," said Roleck, who eventually left the car half-submerged. "It was unbelievable."

Deputy Fire Chief Robert Warren said the ruptured main caused a gas leak under a city street. The gas was shut off.

About 100 people sought temporary housing after leaving their flooded apartment building. Rescuers used rafts to evacuate 30 elderly residents from their assisted living home.

"I was frightened because I can't swim," said resident Mary Recchia, 87. "I was trying to keep from crying and getting hysterical."

Home administrator Brian McKaig said everything inside was soaked. "All of our work is ruined," he said. "Everything these people brought with them, their special furniture, their personal belongings, is ruined."

Three teens charged with trying to set fire to boy on bus

The Associated Press

Three Chariho Regional Middle School students have been charged with trying to set fire to a 10-year-old boy on a school bus.

School officials already had suspended the three teens for 10 days and referred the case to police, who charged the teens on Wednesday.

The incident occurred November 4. The fifth-grade victim told police he was sitting in the back of the bus when a 16-year-old girl heated a pin with a lighter and threatened to stab him.

An eighth-grade boy then held the child down while another eighth-grade boy attempted to ignite the 10-year-old's pant leg.

The younger boy was not hurt. The motive for the assault was unclear. The child's mother has said the older students seemed angry that her son was sitting in their normal seats.

The 14-year-old boy who attempted to set the younger boy's pants on fire faces a felony count of assault with a dangerous weapon and a fifth-degree arson charge. The other teens are charged with misdemeanor assault counts.

All three are in their parents' custody.

Jumping bean prices on the horizon?

Thanks to Glen Camp for forwarding e-mail from the EnviroNews service on today's subject.

Seems that environmentalists in Europe are getting rowdy over a recent development in the US biotechnology industry: genetically engineered soybeans. According to a November 13 story by Susan Ladika, Greenpeace and Global 2000 occupied the Austrian Health Minister's office for refusing to ban imports of US soybeans, and multi-national activists blocked the passage of the Ziemia Zamojska, a Polish-registered cargo ship full of soybeans, into Belgium.

Soybeans and soy oil are useful in most processed foods and many non-food products such as inks and paints; Volvo has even biotechnologists simply placed a gene for Roundup resistance into an economically attractive line of soybeans and 'voila' - weed-free soybean fields with an environmentally friendly, low persistence, non-toxic chemical. Good for Monsanto, good for farmers, good for consumers, right?

Does the resistance gene pose a health threat for consumers or the risk of an environmental disaster? US agencies FDA (Food and Drug Agency) and USDA (Department of Agriculture) looked at Monsanto's scientific data, collected over a five year period, and approved the beans for unlabeled commercial sale.

A naive bystander might wonder why environmentalists would holler about a technology that reduces chemical inputs into the food chain and diminishes pollution of our drinking water supplies. Seasoned industry watchers like Hemp know that anti-biotechnology activists, "countermarketers" to borrow a term from Joe Bonnici, dramatically oppose all biotechnology and all agricultural inputs to get media attention.

For Monsanto...advertise cautiously, stick to scientific data, promote educational programs, and have a big legal staff to defend lawsuits. For the activists...scream "pollution," "exploitation," "health risks," and "profits," and the media will line up to provide free air time. No wonder Hemp is out on the Greenpeace boats; he's having all the fun!

The most environmentally friendly herbicide, Monsanto's Roundup, is toxic to all plants but perfectly safe for all other life forms (Hemp drank some once to prove the point). Even better, in the soil it quickly decomposes to harmless by-products.

The Mad Sage: Struggle for a dream

Myron Gorham
Archway Staff Writer

Now in another job he didn't like, Lunis realized that going this route would ultimately kill his dream forever. He had not come this far to wind-up in the very same situation he just left. No, it was time for him to throw his grove to the ground and push harder than he had ever pushed before. Before he was a bit afraid to take a true risk. Braving deadly storms and wild beasts, more a learning experience than a risk, for the result could only be wisdom. Being face-to-face with guns and ruffians wasn't a risk, for he knew that it was not his time to die. Living in the city still was not a risk, for he knew it was only a mere tunnel to Utopia. But, he never thought he would be penniless. Now his dream was dwindling right before his eyes, and he could feel the strong tight grasp of failure wrapping its cold dark hands around his newly reborn neck.

As he sat in his boring little job typing a boring little letter for his boring little boss, he contemplated a plan. He must put it all on the line to raise himself up to the next level, the level he should have been on. But what could he do? Even though it did seem that he was, he was not exactly a wild and crazy guy. He realized that his only hope now was to go into a cocoon. He must undergo yet another change; a metamorphosis that would pierce deep into the core of his very soul. To obtain his ultimate dream he must first become the person he always wanted to be. After the change, the shyness, that had bind him for most of his life, would wither away completely, and his true personality would shine brightly for the whole world to see.

Lunis got up from his tiresome little chair and walked out of the claustrophobic atmosphere. He uttered not a word and ignored the questions of his streamed new boss. He walked as if he was in a trance, through the long corridor of the mighty business office. And as he left its front doors, he also left behind any and everything that didn't conform to his desire. No more odd jobs to get by in life, for he had decided that he would rather die than work another job he hated.

He returned to the damp raggedy little room that was the apartment he had lived in during the past three months. Even though he had very little stuff, the apartment was cluttered; but what would you expect from a place where a bedroom, bathroom, and living room had all been carved from one little room. He didn't really mind. He hadn't really been living anyway since he had been mugged. But now, everything was about to change, and when he left his cocoon, he would live again.

For five days he sat in a corner that was his bedroom, with his eyes closed in constant meditation. He didn't eat, drink, go to the bathroom, or do anything that would break his concentration. He fought himself in a bitter battle for control; two personalities fighting for dominance over a single soul. But he could not yield to himself; everything that he ever wanted was on the line. He must be victorious here or everything would be lost forever.

And then, the fifth day, he got up, gathered together the little money he had made in the past months, looked at his little room in disgust, opened the front door, and began his struggle for a dream.

Dealing with Lucifer

Myron Gorham
Archway Staff Writer

What do you do when you are constantly exposed to the bad vibes of an impulsively repulsive little person? Do you walk up to this nefarious being and say, "I hate you?" Do you secretly plot an unfortunate accident that it (no way could such a thing be human) will have in the near future? Do you merely let it's bad vibes cause an irregular flux in your field-of-pleasantness? The answer to all these questions is, of course, heck no, even though some of them sound quite intriguing.

Some people are just born evil, obvious disciples of Hell at the point of birth. Others are awarded for their evil throughout life, which sometimes treats them bad, too good, or casts them into the shadow of society to incessantly endure the pain-filled sting of their condescending eyes and reactions. This, to me, serves as no excuse. For I have seen all walks of life and all evil, and have come to the conclusion that it doesn't matter what life throws at you; it is you--your soul--that ultimately decides what you are. And, if you are evil, let me be the first to introduce you to the flames.

I'm sure that you can relate, but then most people aren't as receptive as others. Most people don't even believe in bad karma. But some people are just destined to be bad and enjoy and indulge in their misdeeds enthusiastically. You know. Minor annoyances that are dexteriously played-out to cause your beautiful music to pop a chord. And, of course, you being civilized and all, you must ignore this, and not give in to their game(s). The cracking of their voice shattering your very comprehension and driving you insane. Every move and gesture seeming more and more like an invitation to, no, a declaration of war. And, their very presence sending dark chills throughout the very essence of your being and summoning a dark cloud as your mind is infested with the flood of the over-powering evil of this vile little monstrosity. I'm sure you know what I mean.

As your guile is tainted with the ominous assault of its iniquitous charm and your blood begins to boil as you feel the fires of Hell engulfing you, you come up with the most diabolical of schemes. Boy, he drinks a lot of soda. Hmmm. Rat poison. Hitman, know one would ever be able to tie me to it. The Trojan-horse technique. A sweet little gift that would be his last. Or even better.... A nuclear bomb. Any piece of him leftover would be fried, totally. Or something more subtle like... suicide. I was no where near the room when he jumped out of that window, and there are no witnesses. Or better still: We were playing ball in the room and when he went for it he fell out the window. But then you come to your senses, for you know that if you were to do this, you would become as insidiously loathsome and atrociously inhuman as that primitive beast which is inflicting its evil upon you. And that slaps you back into yourself, and you cast it aside with the fire.

Of course, hate, in itself, is the most potent of evil. So that is not even an option. You can't go around hating people, even if they are evil, even if it was the devil himself. Noooo. But, that doesn't mean you have to like them. Thank God. That would just be too much to bear. So how do you ward off the creeping hate? Boy, it's not an easy job. You must actually summon up all your humanity. Pray onto yourself. And, finally, bring your heart to the brink of explosive. And, of course, if this doesn't work, you must involve yourself in: Auto-Mind-Manipulation (gasp). Don't worry, it's not like brain surgery, even though it can be just as difficult to perform.

First, you must displace yourself from reality. Of course, most people cannot do this, for their imagination died with their innocence. Then you mold reality to exclude this blip in your life. This, too, is very hard for someone to do. How can you just pretend that someone isn't there? Besides, don't you think we're just a bit too old to be playing pretend and make-believe? Nooooo, I don't, but that's a whole different matter. Ignoring evil often drives it away. But not in most cases. Finally, you re-enter reality and cast the perverted fiend into oblivion.

I thought it prudent to make it clear that this isn't a colossal insult to anyone in particular... say someone who I unfortunately share dwelling with. In no way am I using the school newspaper in a distasteful way to openly demean anyone to the whole school, especially no one with the initials, E.L. The purpose of this article is purely to help others learn how to deal with a person they might not like and maintain a civilized demeanor. This is, of course, completely objective. Note: So, I wrote it in a conversational tone with no regard to grammar.... What? Are the English teachers going to sue me?

Going home

As Thanksgiving approaches, many domestic students are looking forward to seeing their family and friends, and eating home-cooked meals. Of course, at the same time, other students are absolutely dreading having to go home, leaving their new-found friends and liberties. For first-year students, this may be the first time they've been home since September, and they may not know what to expect. Here are a few ways to make this holiday a positive time for all.

First, don't spring everything on your parents at once. For example, if you've died your hair a new and interesting color, like blue, you may wish to wear a hat the first day or two you're home, just tell your parents you're having an extremely bad hair they're gatekeepers.

Fifth, actively share the experiences you've had at Bryant. Now, if you happen to have done something really foolish — getting drunk on the day before an exam, for example — you may wish to pick and choose carefully what you say. (If you have gotten drunk on the day before an exam, I hope you've learned that was a really stupid thing to do.) But, for the most part, talking about what you've been doing, who you've met, and how you've grown this semester is important to your family. They want to know that you will be a different and better person as a result of attending Bryant, and only you can share that with them.

Sixth, don't insult high school seniors, particularly if you have high school age siblings at home. High school seniors probably look very young to you now, even if you just graduated last spring. But your younger brother or sister will really resent you calling him or her a "kid," particularly when you were the lead "kid" just a few months ago.

Above all, talk to your family about what they expect of you during this break. If they expect you to visit every single aunt, uncle, cousin, and close family friend over the long weekend and you were planning to relax and watch TV for 96 solid hours, you may find yourself embroiled in a major family feud. If you've learning anything about the art of compromise and consensus by living with a roommate, Thanksgiving break is the time to apply these skills at home.

As for coming back to Bryant after the holiday, remember that after Thanksgiving there are only six class days remaining in the semester. So, if you are still procrastinating about finishing a term paper, or preparing for an upcoming exam, you may wish to consider blocking out some time for academic work during your break. Try sandwiching it between visiting your Aunt Helen and the high school football game. Enjoy!

day. Alternately, you may wish to cut off some of your hair before going home, though, if you always had long hair, this may be a dead giveaway that something is up.

Second, remember that your parents probably go to bed with a reasonably quiet house long before you do. Don't expect to be able to listen to a loud television or music at 3:00 a.m. in the morning—they're not likely to understand.

Third, no matter how broad-minded your family and especially your parents may be, they're still going to be expecting a high school senior to come home. They will not be expecting someone with a lot more independence and autonomy to come home making his or her own decisions. So, to keep peace in the house, tell your family members where you're going before you go out and the approximate time you'll be back. While I know it may seem odd to do that after being away for just a few months, it will keep peace in the family, and isn't that worth something?

Fourth, make a point of carving out some special time for just you and your family. This doesn't mean you shouldn't spend time with friends from high school or previous colleges, but just set aside some time so your family feels less like

Let's talk Negotiation & Conflict Resolution

by Lorianne Harrison
Office of Residence Life

- * Communication is the key to successful relationships and careers.
- * Conflicts are a fact of life.
- * Everyone perceives situations differently.
- * Separate people from the problem.
- * Agree that it is okay to disagree.
- * LISTEN. I mean really listen!
- * There is always more than one solution or option.
- * Respect others opinions. Everyone comes from different backgrounds, etc....
- * "Let's Talk," not fight. When a situation becomes physical, everyone gets hurt.
- * Work together to create a "win-win" situation for both or all parties.

These are ten of the many helpful hints which were addressed during a Negotiation and Conflict Resolution presentation on Thursday, November 7, 1996.

The presenter was Dr. Agnes Doody of Arthur Associates. She is a professor at the University of Rhode Island and a Harvard University certified specialist in Negotiation and Conflict Resolution. In this humorous yet serious workshop, she brought her message to the Bryant Community.

When in conflict, Dr. Doody suggested trying the P.I.E. (Perceived Injurious Experience) format or having a third person mediate the situation. The P.I.E. format can be used in a discussion or in written form. I am going to describe the P.I.E. method to you as if you were writing a letter. The P.I.E. format was developed by Dr. Mary Rowe. It can be applied to almost any and every situation or conflict.

Paragraph #1: Salutation

This paragraph is a description of your relationship. Include a descriptive/supportive statement to support and describe the nature of the relationship. It is important to be positive and present this in good will.

Paragraph #2: Description of the perceived injurious experience.

When writing or speaking to the person, focus on the problem, not the person. Also, focus on the perception and remember not to accuse. Then describe the reaction—hurt, angered, saddened, bewildered, confused etc.—to the Perceived Injurious Experience.

Paragraph #3: Description of what you would like the outcome of this letter or discussion to be.

The following are some possible outcomes: Let's get together and talk about it; let's not let this happen again; STOP! The third paragraph is the action step. This is your opportunity to make it clear you do not want this experience to be repeated. This need NOT be written or spoken with hostility or anger. If you are gracious, fair and firm, you will find you have a mighty persuasive trio.

Your third statement should be followed by the closing statement. This should be a positive and/or professional note to conclude and wrap-up the discussion or letter.

This is an example of a P.I.E. letter: Dear Francis,

We have been friends for over three years and roommates at college for two of those three years. Our relationship means a lot. You are like a sister to me.

This is why I am so hurt and saddened by our fight last night. I was hurt by the mean words that were exchanged between the two of us. I feel we were both stressed, angry, and over-tired.

I hope we can sit down and talk this situation through. I truly believe this will help make our friendship even stronger. Let's talk and really listen to each other. Why don't we get off campus and go out to dinner?

I am looking forward to seeing you tonight after classes.

Your friend always, Anna

If you need a person to mediate a conflict between you and someone, there are many on-campus resources available, such as Resident Assistant(s), Resident Director(s), Area Director(s), the Counseling Office, and/or anyone in the Division of Student Affairs. We are all here to help you.

If you are interested in learning more about communication, negotiation and conflict resolution, Dr. Doody and I recommend you read the following books: Getting to Yes, Authors Roger Fisher and William Ury of the Harvard Negotiation Project, and the two books by Dr. Deborah Tannen, That's Not What I Meant, You Just Don't Understand, and Talking from 9 to 5.

Let me leave you with a final thought: When you are in conflict with another person, the best way to understand where that person is "coming from" and what issues are involved in the conflict is to get into that person's shoes. Or, to quote an old Native American adage, "Do not criticize the other person until you have walked a mile in his/her moccasins."

Negotiation and conflict resolution is a life skill. Learn more about it today. It takes practice and hard work to become a good communicator in your personal and professional lives.

Second annual Writers' Harvest

Last Wednesday evening, Bryant's literary community prepared itself once again for the Annual Writers' Harvest. Sponsored nationally, this event involves formal reading of various works of poetry and prose. This event also took place across the country in many locations. The Writers' Harvest hopes to raise awareness of the hunger problem facing our country as well as raise money to fight it locally. All proceeds donated went directly to the Rhode Island Community Food Bank.

Many readers with various styles and methods read their works. Several published (or soon to be published) authors also read, creating a hint of mastery to the air.

Thank you to the English department and the Writers' Harvest Committee for making this evening possible.

Who's Who nominations solicited

For more than 60 years, students have been nominated for the Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges award in recognition of their student achievement. Bryant participates in this prestigious selection by nominating up to 60 students to receive this honor.

Students can be nominated by any member of the Bryant community. The award is given based on the student's accomplishment in: scholarship ability, exhibiting leadership in curricular and co-curricular activities, citizenship and service to Bryant College, and potential for future achievement.

The Bryant College Awards committee will be meeting in the near future to review nominations. No more than 60 undergraduate and graduate students will be selected for this award. Nomination forms are available in the Vice President of Student Affairs Office, the Graduate School Office, the Office of Residence Life, and the Office of Student Activities.

For further information on this award or other Bryant awards, please call the committee chairman, Richard Glass, at ext. 6393.

Wanna Catcha Movie...Or Something?

By Nigel "Loquutus of The Borg" Fubara

Once again, I have arrived to serve up a steaming hot helping of entertainment ideas. I brave the elements in search of movies. I am smuggled far behind enemy lines to seek out and destroy ugliness preparing to pose as music bands. I risk my neck time after time, only barely making it back out alive. I meet with shadowy figures in dark, dank, and deserted alleys to discuss upcoming Broadway musicals. I pore over countless hours of video tape searching for any piece of celluloid trash that might pop up and annihilate your viewing nirvana like a half-eaten cockroach found in your strawberry kiwi Jello. On this week's menu, we have many rare treats. Well, they are not so rare. Okay, they are pretty pedestrian, but they're good!

42nd Street 1/2

This Broadway musical, playing at the Providence Performing Arts Theater is a humorous flashback to a more innocent and gay time in America. Somewhat gaudy, this play is about what can only be described as--the shenanigans that occur behind the scenes of a Broadway show opening are witty, well-acted and contain an underlying message of the infinite possibilities of the courageous human spirit. The play, bright and flashy in its set design, artistic in its production, and brilliant in its direction and set changes, is something of a reality warp into another life dimension. Not a bad dimension, just a different one from the beer, party, Tommy Hilfiger, Extreme games, and grunge rock atmosphere of our generation. It is a good idea to step off the well-beaten path once in a while and take in some culture.

After the show's opening yesterday, I had an opportunity to speak with Michelle Felton, who plays Dorothy Brock in the play. A tiny woman with a powerful presence, she took the time to describe the world she lives in; the long thirteen hour days, the constant travel (They have already done over 400 shows!). I asked her where she wanted to see her already successful career go. She replied that her dream was to star in Sunset Blvd. on Broadway. As the oldest member of the cast (34), she also remarked that she had to be something of a mature role model to the rest of the members (whose average age is 21). When asked about the sacrifices she had to make to get where she is today, she spoke quite emotionally about not having a home (living out of a storage space and a suitcase); being on the road so much and having moved to New York only days before she started this job, she hadn't had time to buy or lease a home. She also remarked on not having children of her own. As the youngest of several sisters, she recounted the ribbing she gets from her older sisters who have children of their own. Formally a professional equestrian, she says that her life is quite fulfilling and exciting. A truly happy and outgoing woman, Ms. Felton personifies the whole cast and the exuberance of 42nd Street. As I did with Les' Misreble's, I will warn you that these productions move on at a different speed than the strobe light, mushroom-induced gyrations of your MTV's and multi-explosion John Woo films. It makes for a great evening out with friends and should be incorporated into something of a bi-semester tradition. All you have to do is skip a couple of beer and spice runs, and store that money for the theater. To look out for: Miss Saigon is coming soon to PPAC. Also on the theater scene, keep an eye out for the Christmas classic, A Christmas Carol, starting soon at the Trinity Repertory Theater. Directed by Brian McEleney, whose credits include the 1993-1994 season of Measure for Measure, and played by a great cast that includes Anne Scurria and Ed Shea, this promises to be as good as it has always been. There are also special discounts for students, so give them a ring at 401-456-0000.

On the movie front - General Cinemas in Lincoln is playing:

Larger than Life 1/2 (A more subtle Bill Murray)

The Mighty Ducks III * (Sequel City)

Ransom 1/2 (Mel Gibson just being Mel Gibson)

At the Showcase Cinemas

Romeo & Juliet 1/2 (Shakespeare, like, totally does Beverly Hills, and some junk, dude. Wait for the video.)

Dear God N/S

The Long Kiss Goodnight ****

Sleepers N/S

The Funeral N/S

The First Wives Club ****

The Mirror Has Two Faces N/S

Space Jam  (Good to take your kid brother to. Not the hard edge Looney Tunes I remember. Still a bunch of fun.)

Coming soon - Jingle All the Way - Arnold tries his hand at comedy again. Set in middle America and about a dad doing everything to get his son a special Christmas gift. We will all keep our fingers crossed that it doesn't suck. Also starring Sinbad, which doesn't speak well of this movie's prospects.

If you have watched any of the N/S (Not Screened) movies and would like to comment on them, you can call me at ext. 6488 or e-mail me at <kfubara@acad.bryant.edu>.

The Strand

God Street Wine is going to be playing at The Strand soon. Tune in to 88.7 WJMF for chances to win tickets or call The Strand box office.

Decadent Dance Party - I would like to say more about it, but this is a conservative publication. Definitely check this out!

Live Professional Boxing - If you get off on grown men beating each others' brains out (I know I do!).

Luscious Jackson - They have returned!

Kid Capri - The Legendary "Def Comedy Jam" DJ

Lupo's

The Lemonheads - All those hummable jingles we love will be here live on the 25th.

Gregory Isaac - Will be in town on Wednesday, December 11.

WJMF will also be giving away tickets for this megafest, running an interview with the man himself, and giving away free CD's, so tune in.

Poetry Corner Pavement

This field was where senseless kids fought.
God, this scene breeds familiarity.
Conflict, consumed with anger and aggression.
Foolish, immature, saving of face,
though it didn't seem it at the time.
Grass stains become battle scars.
Crying for a guardian to step in and point reverence.

Although often a combatant, occasionally I was one of those kids who just stood back.

Watching rank pink bloodspill.
Children too young to bleed red,
too young to do much of anything.

Sometimes I regret never stepping in, though I'm not too sure if I had the capabilities to.
Those scars seem faint now anyway.
Even though this field still holds so much,
its newborn desolation does it no justice.

Pavement covers most of the trenches now.
Standing nature replaced with towering light fixtures.

Maybe, just maybe,
if those lights were there before,
scars would have been less.
At least we all could have seen more.

Senseless violence at its purest,
just a friendly rivalry to us.
It makes me feel guilty-with no pavement to cover my memory.

Special Guest Visits MSU

Blood Center Marrow Program

On Wednesday, November 20, Maria Cruz from Pawtucket visited MSU to tell a very special story. Maria, who is 27 years old, was diagnosed with chronic leukemia two years ago while she was pregnant with her first child. Since that day, Maria and her family (which includes her husband, Winston, and daughter, Jordan, now 1 1/2 years old) have been on a quest to cure Maria's leukemia.

Maria's doctors told her a bone marrow transplant is a chance for a cure, but Maria has no one who matches her bone marrow type. No one, that is, in her family or in the National Registry of over 2 million volunteers. The National Marrow Donor Program (NMDP), created in 1986, is an organization which provides unrelated bone marrow donors to patients in need of a transplant. The NMDP Registry is searched when a patient does not have a family match.

Because a patient's most likely match outside the family is someone of the same racial or ethnic group, patients from minority communities are less likely than non-minorities to find matched donors on the Registry. This is the case with Maria. Maria is from Columbia so her best chance of finding a match is from the Hispanic population.

Of the 2,453,678 volunteers listed on the National Registry, only 161,693 are Hispanic. In fact the combined minority groups (African American, Hispanic, Asian and Native American) only total 526,000, or approximately one-quarter of the entire registry.

Maria was invited by MSU to increase awareness about the serious need for more volunteers on the National Registry. To join is simple. At the blood drive in Janikies Auditorium on Monday, December 2, from 10am to 5pm, representatives from the Rhode Island Blood Center, the local office of the NMDP will be present to answer questions about the program. Anyone between 18 and 60 years old and in good health can register by completing a short application/health history form. Then a small sample of blood is taken either with a regular blood donation or performed separately if a person is not donating blood. The blood test will show what a donor's bone marrow (HLA) type is and then entered into the National Registry. While listed on the Registry, if a complete match is found, the donor is counseled about the donation process and given a physical examination after a thorough information session. The marrow is extracted in a simple hospital procedure using either general or regional anesthesia. Only 2 - 5% of marrow is extracted from the hip bone with a needle. The marrow then replenishes itself naturally, and the only ill effects are a sore lower back for a few days.

Maria urged the Multicultural Student Union to become involved in the "opportunity of a lifetime." For more information about becoming a bone marrow donor, please call the Rhode Island Blood Center at (800) 283-8385, extension 564.

Poetry Corner

The following selections ("Growing Up..") was submitted by Meg Springer, Assistant Director of Multicultural Student Services at Bryant College. It originally appeared in the Nov/Dec 1993 issue of Fellowship Journal, and was reprinted with permission in Oppression and Empowerment - Essays on Racism and Social Change Activism, a collection of writings by Andrea Ayvazian, an anti-racism educator with Communitas, a non-profit organization in Northampton, Massachusetts. It is intended to be a catalyst to encourage self-introspection and discussion around issues of self identity and worldview formation. The Multicultural Student Services staff welcomes you to stop by the office, 2nd Floor Unistructure, to share reactions, responses and further the discussion.

Growing Up White in America

Not vicious.
No overt meanness
Not in my family, my neighborhood.

Simply not noticing.
Not unkind. Just unaware.

At home, in school, at church
the messages were subtle beyond subtle
invisible, undetectable
like oxygen
inhaled with every breath.

Who helped guide me?
Who helped me understand the meaning of my white skin of brown skin
black skin.

My minister, my teachers,
my pediatrician, my dentist,
my piano teacher,
my parents, their friends
All white.

They did not do or say anything racist.
But they did nothing to combat racism.
They pretended to be colorblind
They said nothing.
They did nothing.

Whiteness was the standard, the norm
Why point it out?
Why discuss difference?

Left alone to understand race on my own.
I did not understand.
On Sundays I learned
"we are all children of God..."
It did not look that way
Monday through Saturday.

*The author, a Quaker in Northampton, MA, is what could I do that would make you come running back how can I pull the truth from your lips

I have not found a way to tell you that I have to have you nor can I bring myself to tell you what I miss my fingers tracing every contour every curve releasing the day's stress in one long nite telling you a million times just what you are worth making up after every fight
I meant all that I said and all those words still stand true
I feel nothing, dream nothing, live nowhere without you.

is your pride in the way does it make you stumble does it staple your mouth shut it must be larger than life or at the very least your pride must be larger than us children, wedding rings, vows, lifetime commitment is what we thought we had in store
children, wedding rings, vows, lifetime commitment are the dreams that we chose to ignore
I am utterly amazed in a fog in a daze that you would let something so good pass you buy she gave, she shared, she loved, she cared she asked what cliff and how high

I'm trying to say good-bye my friend as you turn your back to ride on home with family and friends is where we both find ourselves in the end but somehow we will still feel alone
I told you no lies I did give you my heart it serves no purpose for me anymore you were the ONE, the man of my dreams who I had been saving it for.

Beta Theta Pi

David Koestner

Our sixth annual Putt-a-Thon was this Tuesday and Wednesday. Proceeds went to the Muscular Dystrophy Association, and we thank everyone for contributing.

Thanks Theta for a good time on Beta-Theta Night and for your help this week. Also thank you Rugby for Saturday night; sorry most of us showed up late. This past week, John Elway had the honor of meeting Bobby "22 on 21" Weddleton.

There is some sort of disease lurking around the floor. By the looks of Spalding, he had a full night Saturday. The pictures will tell all. Monte is going to Euro-Disney. Mork was the center of attention on Saturday. He made us all proud. Ren is always looking. Gunnar gave Monte CPR at Delta Zeta. Otis asked for a butt; Smithers just wanted a bite. Otis's friend left a present for us. Jethro lost his footing. Lark found out more people played Bourne football than he thought. Ragoo had a chauffeur at the airport. Cobb is on his death bed.

Quotes of the week: "There have been more quotes of the week tonight than the whole year." "Don't write on me anymore, I'm having allergic reactions."

Commuter Connection

Andrew Young

Howdy Commuters! For those of you who are stressing over where the Commuter Connection will be located in the future, worry no more. After a few field trips with Tim to visit the Smith House, it has been decided that we will not be moving. Sorry to all those that couldn't wait to pounce on our office space in the Bryant Center. It was decided that the Smith House just isn't the place for us.

Thanksgiving is right around the corner and with it comes the commuter trip to Boston. The trip is on Saturday and anyone who would like to go but didn't get their name on the list should check in the office, some people have backed out, making room for others who wish to attend. Of course you could also follow the bus in your own car. However, with Jessica and Mike driving, that may be difficult.

Be sure to keep your calendar clear for Wednesday, December 4. It's the Commuter Christmas Party at The Junction. Afterwards we all plan to join the entire Bryant Community at the Festival of Lights. Keep all these great activities in mind; we hope to see you there!

Delta Chi

James Dow

Welcome to another edition of D-Chi news. I would like to start this week's column by thanking the Kappas for Friday night; it was fun while it lasted. Alumni made their presence felt this weekend and hope the turnout for this weekend is as successful. A thanks goes out to DZ for Saturday night.

In sports, our hockey team has been doing well; however, the absence of F-Sharp will be missed on the defensive end.

Now let's run down the brothers who made headlines this past weekend. Dutch and Newman visited Dorm 14 on Saturday night as we confined Goose to the floor. Stash missed Saturday night as we went to a GDI formal as Assumption. Wally is gearing up for the formal; BEWARE!

Wilk got a new haircut and it actually looks worse than mine: Thanx Zippo. Hey Dutch, don't fool yourself, girl.....

Wally also beat myself in the contest, but I'm still in the semester lead. Happy Anniversaries go out to Iotas, Etas, & Zetas this week. The race is also on to graduate; Zak versus Miah. Finally. A congrats goes out to the "Hawkers" for a good showing in the Bowl last week. Until next week...

Tip of the Week: Just because it happened in the past, doesn't mean it can't change.

Quote of the Week: "Hey, did everyone get a piece?"

Prediction of the Week: After last weeks, I'll take a week off!!

Stat of the Week: After losses to Denver and Washington, the Celtics dropped to 2-6.

Delta Kappa Epsilon

Manuel Tierny

The brothers of DKE would like to give a phat shout out to Mike "O.G." Tokla, who turned 20 this week. By the way, your gift is in the mail. We would also like to thank Sig Ep for contributing to a good time on Saturday night, we finally had a good turn out. Once again, Josh "Bob" Almeida managed to disappear without a trace this weekend. Josh, a car can not roll uphill. Speaking of disappearing, we may not see Jesse around for a while, actually for about two years.

Carmine "Snoochie Bucci" Rucci had a busy weekend. Apparently, he had caused minor damage on TEP's floor and then managed to give himself a concussion by running into Harper and Romo's door. Macero had a good Friday; then again, anyone would if they spent eight hours at Rente's. Well, I hope everyone enjoys the rest of this week and has a great weekend. Once again I would like to leave with Spyder's quote of the week: "1782¹² + 1841¹² = 1922¹²"

Delta Zeta

Nicole Greenlaw

Sorry about last week everyone! We have a lot of anniversaries this week: Iotas, 2 and counting! The Lambdas-Congrats! Happy 21st Chayse! Ben, thanks for everything...especially dinner-Wesli.

Apollo, you're finally legal; it's all downhill from now. Thanks to Rugby for Friday night--great 70's party; Val, Allyson, and Heather want to do it again sometime. ZumaZuma was taken to a new level--"Como Se Llamo!" Murph is not allowed to order from The Junction when playing with Medusa. Coras; are you up for another session?-Wesli.

Welcome home, Enrique and Alejandro! Bishop kept us entertained! Thanks to Beta for Saturday morning; the Aqua Velva was a good touch! Savy and Mattie proved that they were the Jen G and Heather, we'll have to do it again-Jenn and Suzy. Val wants to thank Philly, Ben, and the rest of TKE who took care of her on Saturday. Thanks, Monte, for being so considerate to my floor and sacrificing your shoes!-Galileo.

Thanks, Delta Chi, for Saturday night's game night. Sandi, have that PKB club! "Wait a minute! I need a TRISCUT!"-Savy. Sorry, Buddy and Jeff...I love ya-Suzy. Hey, Mutts and Itches, let's get together soon! I miss you!-Becca.

Economics Association

Jason Hollis

Hello everyone. The Association would like to invite everyone to come to the Papitto Dining Room on Monday, November 25, at 6:30 p.m., for Part I of our Careers in Economics Speaker Series. Our guest speaker will be Mr. Eric J. Anderson, Deputy Director of the Rhode Island Economic Development Corporation.

The Association is open to everyone regardless of class or major. We urge anyone with an interest in economics to come; it should be very entertaining as Eric is a very lively speaker. Dues will be collected, and you will have a chance to meet the officers and discuss plans for the Association. Hope to see you there!

The Entrepreneurship Club

Michael Tuttle

Hello to all of you. Our next meeting will be on Wednesday, December 4. The time, room, and speaker are still to be announced. Everyone is welcome. Look for signs around campus for information on the next meeting. This will be the last meeting of the semester. Next semester we are planning a Franchise Day, in which we will have speakers come and speak on starting up and running a franchise. It should be a good time. We will have more on this at the beginning of next semester. If you have any comments, concerns, or questions, please e-mail us at entclub@acad.bryant.edu. I wish you all a safe and happy Thanksgiving.

ISO

Eunjo Lee

Hello, all members. With your help, International Students' Organization has been doing many events this semester. One of big events was The United Nations Festival. As you all know, we all did it successfully. YES! There were a lot of people who were interested in each country, their culture, history, food and so forth. Each table represented its own country wonderfully. With many sponsors, the event was stronger. Thank you, all members and sponsors, for your cooperation.

ISO is planning a Thanksgiving Dinner this Sunday with MSU. Please, come and join this event. We will announce the exact time and place soon by your e-mail. Hopefully, we will have a great time with you all again.

Another upcoming event is that all members are invited by President Machtley for dinner. It is going to be Thursday, December 5. We are going to meet in Bryant Center rm. 2A at 5:30 p.m. More information will be given at our next meeting. Come and join the dinner with President of Bryant College. Do not miss your opportunity!

ISO is always cooperative with our members. We listen to you and make this organization more important to you. We also welcome new members. Our meetings are held every Monday in Bryant Center Room 2A at 4:00 p.m. Come to a meeting and get involved in our organization. Thank you.

Phi Sigma Sigma

Valerie Arold

Hello. I hope everyone had a great week. First, we would like to congratulate Wendy on a great volleyball season.

Phi Sig would like to thank everyone who wandered up on Friday night. Some sisters would also like to thank TEP for Thursday night. Speaking of TEP, do you guys have any music requests? Wheels thinks that I can't count, but at least I know where the Euphrates River is located. Sunny, what's that hanging on your wall? You are so slick. "We're going to Nebraska, and if we can't find a Stop 'N' Shop, then we'll just have to compromise." Some of our sisters would like to thank Beta for Saturday morning. We had a blast. Hey Sahara, I thought the desert was supposed to be dry. Hey Blue Hornet, there's an emergency, find the nearest shower. Most of Screech's celebration was spent on the floor. Enzo's an actuarial major? Sunny D and Christy were getting down to Bobby B. this weekend. And now for the quote of the week, "See that Tide...I'm about that clean"-Billy Bob. That's all for now. I hope everyone has a great Thanksgiving!

Phi Kappa Tau

Ryan Foley

Hello everyone, hope you all had a good week. The associates are coming along fine.

This weekend we enjoyed hanging around with Tri Sig's alumni. We would like to give a special thanks to Kristen for her generous donations to all of us at Rente's. Strecci and Bartlett had a popcorn fight on Friday and found themselves stuck out in the cold. We all enjoyed our vacation from Charles for the four days that he was gone. On Saturday, we had a special visit from our seniors of last year. They took Wista to Foxwoods to pay off his temporary loan from the summer.

Jamie, sorry for the battle wound and sorry to the poor hockey sticks that ended up broken. Hey, Ivy May, next time try to be a little more discrete; of all people we thought you had manners! Shila a.k.a. the big Q-Gates. Well, that's all for this week. KT top dog!

Student Alumni Association

Darrell Cook

The Hartford Chapter Meeting was last Thursday. I hope all who attended found it enjoyable. Next time you'll have to eat before you go. This week is the Boston Chapter Meeting. We will be leaving around 5:00 p.m. Everyone is still invited to attend. Please contact either Susan or an e-board member if interested. This year's committees all seem to be going smoothly. The orders have begun to come in for Survival Kits. Help is still needed for most of these events, especially Festival of Lights. Any help is truly appreciated. Good luck to all!

Society for Human Resource Management

Jessica Burns

Hi everyone!! I just wanted to thank Mr. Steve Hines of Landmark Medical Center for visiting with us last Tuesday. He did a wonderful job filling in at the last minute for Mike Oliver of Norrell Staffing Services. Mr. Hines talked to us about all areas of HR, from starting out to handling sexual harassment. For those of you who were interested in the topic to be presented by Mr. Oliver, look for his rescheduled presentation next semester.

I hope everybody had a good time at Parente's on Tuesday, and don't forget, there is another Parente's Night coming up on December 3. Thanks for supporting SHRM!

SPB

Once again hello everyone. I trust all is well. As you have probably read from my past articles, this is the time of year that I have been working for. Only a few more days until Thanksgiving break. Make sure you all enjoy it, final preparation begins when we come back.

Thank you to everyone who attended Phenomenon this past weekend. Everything went over very well. We have a few great activities coming up this weekend. On Saturday the 23, God Street Wine will be performing at the Strand in Providence, followed by a dance party. The show starts at 8 p.m. and tickets are on sale now at the info desk for only $5. Tickets will be available at the door for about $8. Also on Saturday night and on Sunday, SPB will be showing Independence Day in Janikees. The cost is $1 on Saturday and $1.50 on Sunday which includes soda and popcorn. Enjoy all of the events and have a wonderful break.

Tau Epsilon Phi

Ray Belanger

The brothers would like to welcome anyone interested to come meet us on the third floor of dorm two and/or at our townhouses, A6 and A7. Congratulations for some big wins on the football field. Between our two teams, we have only had one loss for the year. We still have a few spots left on the team for anyone interested. It was nice to have brother Kells up for one more weekend before he goes to North Carolina. It is also good to hear that Hyde and Wiggler are doing very well overseas. This week was another wild one for the brothers. We got a good start Friday, with a little help from Rico; nice to see business is going well for you. The town houses were the place to be this weekend with Phi-Tep Friday, and "Slammin" it up with Theta on Saturday. Murrey will be starring in the next edition of Dance Fever. Mrs. Wheels wasn't happy about the condition of the floor. Will and Dmitri started a new form of recycling. The mess of the week goes to Greenlaw, by default. Now we will leave you with the quote of the week: "Let's get one thing straight, I'm not number nine, I'm number one."

The Bryant Players

Meagan Mirkovich

Greetings! Rehearsals for M*A*S*H continue. If anyone is interested in helping out behind the scenes for M*A*S*H with costumes, make-up, sets, etc., please stop into our meetings on Tuesdays at 5 p.m. in Room 2A of the Bryant Center.

In other news: Hot Lips is suffering from a sore back. Since when is Frankenstein Frankenstein? Is it really a compliment when someone says you make a great ditz? The singing needs some work, thank God for Trapper. Watch out Bryant, here come the M*A*S*H dancers! Who says there was no Macarena in the 50's? Thanks to Allison for all of her help with this week's column.

Overheard: "The cast of M*A*S*H is practicing their hooked on phonics."

WJMF

Frank L. Milazzo

The first ever subliminal sarcasm Archway column (you'll catch on). Apparently, I haven't written a column in so long that the Archway thought I changed my last name to Miles (refer to last week's issue you were not interested in reading all the way through). I, as in all things that go wrong, blame Nigel (one hell of a model American with one hell of a game show host voice). Beside the absence of written representation, the station has been doing well (aside from some minor explosions and hostage situations).

Upcoming Show Information: Saturday, November 23, brings God Street Wine to the Strand (boy, these guys have come a long way from playing Bryant two years ago). TOOL and Psychotica play the Strand on November 26 (hide the small children). Also, mark your daily planners for Sunday, December 8, as Rusted Root and G. Love & Special Sauce come to Providence. Attack of the mainstream alternative (the a-word) bands at Lupo's- Better than Ezra play on November 23, Sponge plays November 24, and Weezer brings their catchy (no talent) rock into town on November 27. For those seeking more intellectual stimulation (Bryant students??), Henry Rollins performs an evening of spoken word on December 3.

WJMF is also seeking talented, enthusiastic, bordering on brilliant people to become DJ's (actually, breathing is the basic requirement). Visit me and the multi-talented WJMF DJ staff upstairs in the MAC (okay, somewhat talented). Contrary to popular belief, we play all forms of music from alternative to urban to whatever else there is (don't judge a station by one show). So, if you have a desire to be heard by millions of people around the R.I. area (doesn't everyone?) and have a few hours to spare getting trained (No farm animals involved!), come see what we have to offer (resume builder).

Well, I can't think of anything else to say (I'm tired of writing). Just press 6150 on your phone to hear today's best music (pick up the receiver first). Remember- WJMF 88.7 FM- the number one radio station based in Smithfield, RI. Until next week, think about "it."

Women's Rugby

Summer Wallace and Erica Wright

Hey Rugger! Congratulations to the new E-board members of Women's Rugby: Carolyn Cichon and Pam Smith, Co-Presidents, Sara Couture and Kim Noyes, Social Secretaries, Toni Eannotti, Treasurer, and Chrissy Petrone, Match Secretary. We know you girls will do a great job, good luck!!!

We hope everyone had fun this weekend. We'd like to thank Delta for a good time on Friday night. Too bad DJ Canasta had to run away from the game every two seconds. Deanna needs more practice for next time. Hey Spartan, do it for Randy. Also, we would like to thank Beta for Saturday. Hopefully, next time no fire alarms! Hey Merlin, don't forget mums the word on the composite.

We hope that everyone is excited for Friday. It won't be the same without Punky falling down the stairs! Someone will probably take your place. We are going to have a great time!

Bulldog hockey keeps on trucking

Bob Clark

Bryant opened its weekend with a league game at home against Johnson & Wales University. Johnson & Wales jumped out to the early lead with a goal 4 minutes into the game. The Bulldogs answered right back on a goal by Dave Zielinski and assisted by Jack Edwards. Johnson & Wales scored late in the first period for a 2-1 advantage at intermission. Bryant answered back in the second on an unassisted goal by Edwards. Johnson & Wales then scored their third goal to retake the lead 3-2. A late second period goal by Seth Anderson on a Jim McCarthy assist tied the game at 3 apiece. Bryant then put on its normal third period charge. Edwards scored his second unassisted goal of the game, putting Bryant into the lead midway through the third. Johnson & Wales pulled its goalie with just over a minute left, which paid off as they scored with 56 seconds remaining to deadlock the game at 4-4. Pete Somers turned away 37 Johnson & Wales shots in the tie.

On Saturday, the Bulldogs hosted the defending league champions Franklin Pierce. The two teams skated to a very hard-fought and scoreless first period. The battle continued into the second period. Franklin Pierce got on the board first with a goal late in the second. Bryant came out fired up in the third period and pounded the Franklin Pierce goalie with 23 shots. Shawn Tyler tied the game by tipping in a Rich Botham shot with an assist by Eric Toussaint. Botham then scored Bryant's go-ahead goal with 7 minutes left on an Anderson assist. Edwards iced the game for the Bulldogs on a Steve Delaney assist with minutes remaining. Somers stonewalled the Franklin Pierce offense with several spectacular saves and recorded 40 saves in total.

Bryant has upped its record to 6-1-1 and looks to continue its winning ways this weekend. They host CCRI on Friday, November 22, at 8:10 p.m. in Burrillville. You can catch Bulldog hockey on the road as they travel to WPI for a Saturday game at 7:30 p.m.

Patriots corner: Week 11 Broncos at Patriots

Monsieur Patriot

Last Sunday, our beloved New England Patriots took to the field at Foxboro Stadium for a marquee matchup with the Denver Broncos. Both arm chair quarterbacks and the so-called "experts" around the country were calling the game a battle for supremacy in the AFC. The Patriots entered week 11 tied for first place (with the Buffalo Bills) at 7-3 in the very competitive AFC East, while the Broncos stood atop the AFC West with the NFL's best record at 9-1. The main concern for the Patriots was the ability of their suspect defense (which currently ranks ahead of only Baltimore in yards allowed per game in the AFC) to stop the potent Denver Broncos' offense. Denver, led by future hall of famer John Elway at quarterback, has always been considered a dangerous passing team, however, thanks to last year's draft in which Denver acquired running back Terrel Davis, the once pass-happy Broncos are now, at times, unstoppable. For the Patriots, who were coming off four straight wins against divisional opponents, it appeared that once again their offense would have to put up big numbers in order to keep up with Denver. Led by Drew Bledsoe at quarterback, the Patriots have an offense that seems to have limitless potential. After scoring just 20 points combined in their first two games against Miami and Buffalo, the offense had exploded over the last eight games averaging a league best of 30 points per game. Therefore, everyone going into the game knew that whichever team's defense could maintain some type of control would win the game.

Unfortunately, all the fanfare going into this game was laid to rest in the opening moments of the game, along with any hopes of a Patriots win. In the game's opening series, the Patriots attempted a fake punt on the fourth down. For one brief moment, it appeared that Tom Tupa (Patriots punter and third string quarterback) would fool the Broncos, begin the onslaught, and set the tone for complete and utter domination. Unfortunately he did, just not quite as I expected. Fifteen yards down field was the wide open speedster David Megget, but ten yards further down field was a semi-wide open linebacker named Teddy Bruski. Lets see, a semi-open linebacker or a wide open running back, who do you throw to? For some insane reason Tupa choose Bruski, who failed to hold onto the ball, thereby giving the Broncos the ball on the Patriots' thirty yard line. Had Tupa chosen to go to Megget, who knows what might have happened; perhaps he may have turned up field and gone all the way, maybe he would have sparked the domination I spoke of earlier, perhaps, maybe, perhaps... Terrel Davis finished the short field drive with a touchdown pass from John Elway (a play in which at least four Patriots missed Davis en route to the end zone). The very next series Patriots quarterback Drew Bledsoe tossed a rare interception, but an interception never the less, once again giving the Broncos the ball inside the Patriots thirty yard line, and, once again, producing a Terrel Davis touchdown. The Patriots never seemed to get going in the first half, and, at times, the whole first place thing seemed like just a dream, with the score Broncos 24, Patriots 0 at the half.

The second half looked just as bad as the first, aside from a Curtis Martin rushing touchdown mid-way through the third quarter. And, as if the gates of hell themselves had opened up to completely consume our Patriots, Patriots rookie sensation wide receiver Terry Glen, the one player who actually came prepared to play, went down with a concussion in the third quarter during an attempted diving catch. He is now listed as day to day (I pray he returns soon). Mercifully, the good Lord finally put an end to the destruction, and, along with it, the Patriots' share of first place. Final score: Broncos 37 - Patriots 8.

Bill Parcells stated that after the game his team had been outplayed in every aspect of the game and had simply had their collective buttocks handed to them. However, I blame poor officiating; illegal drug use by Broncos players; rules designed specifically by the NFL to stop the Patriots from winning; umm... poor field conditions; bad Bronco uniform colors, which illegally blinded Patriots players; and John Elway's enormous teeth, which distracted Patriots defensive backs and linebackers. In all honesty, the Patriots defense failed to hold Broncos offense in check. Allowing Terrel Davis to run for 150+ yards kept the Patriots offense off the field while, at the same time, it kept the Broncos defense fresh and ready to stop the Patriots. Besides that, let's face it, if you give the Bryant Bulldog football team the ball inside the 30 yard line on their first three possessions, they will demolish you, too (Question: Do we even have a team? I didn't think so.). Had the Patriots been able to get the ball to Curtis Martin more often and run more then a RECORD SETTING LOW of 9 times, maybe we would have had a chance. The Chicago Bears were able to keep the Broncos offense off the field and their defense tired by running over, around, and through them two weeks ago. Unfortunately, when you turn the ball over and gift wrap a 24-0 lead, passing becomes somewhat of a necessity. Had we not started so bad, things may have been different. Maybe the Patriots still thought they were playing the Jets; we do play them again in a few weeks. Maybe they were just confused and figured 24-0 was nothing; it's just the Jets. Too bad it was the Broncos.

Next Up: The third place Indianapolis Colts (6-5) visit Foxboro Stadium for a rematch with the now second place Patriots (7-4).

Last Game: Patriots won at Colts
Monsieur's Pick: Patriots 27, Colts 17 (The Colts are battling for playoff survival, but they can't match the Patriots offense, especially in Foxboro. I will be in the locker room for post win comments.)
